Chas. E. Moore.

Rock county ought to bond itself for $1,000,000 for the purpose of building permanent highways, according to John A. Hazelwood, chairman of the state highway commission, who spoke Tuesday evening at the monthly meeting of the Twilight club. His recommendation was directed not so much to the members of the Twilight club as to the members of the county board of supervisors, who were special guests. Members of the board, declared Hazelwood, could conscientiously oppose a bond issue and still vote for a referendum before the voters at the county at the spring election.

Charles E. Moore, county highway commissioner, discussing the present road building situation in Rock county, advised in favor of a trunk line system paved with concrete, and recommended changes in the state highway laws providing for a tax on abutting property to pay part of the cost of paving and for a readjustment of the automobile license system. J. Doneghy, also of the state highway commission, gave an illustrated lecture on Wisconsin highways, demonstrating some of the work which has been done and indicating some of the obstacles which it was found necessary to overcome.

Mr. Hazelwood appeared on the program in the place of F. A. Cannon.

He confined himself largely to a discussion of the subject of financing good roads and pointed out that the only means to secure a true line system of permanent highways is by a bond issue. He insisted that the state would be no more

GINGLES' JINGLES

SPRING.

I know that spring is with us. That it's here beyond a doubt. When mother hangs a rug on me and says go beat it out. And sister Susie hits the path that leads to heaps of trash and I'm the bus they load it on and eat all turn to hash. Excuse me if I seem too rude, but sniff the carpet dust and it will cloud your thoughts sublime and fill you with disgust, and trail the tinware to the yard behind a one-wheeled cart and watch your thoughts of love take wings and suddenly depart. This spring stuff does sounds good in song and may look good in verse, but for the gink that helps clean house, there's nothing could be worse. The acrobatic stunts you do, most throws you out of plum, and nooks and corners you must reach, puts muscles on the bum. You fret and stew more than you work, and wish that you were dead, but stop and think it over, all this grief is in your head. You play golf and baseball or you hit the tennis court. You play till all is down and out and yet you call it sport, but let a wife or mother or a sister ask your help, you raise the bristles on your neck, lay back your ears and yelp. You'll find the road to happiness you pave with every boost. And don't forget that all your acts will fly back home Linnet Sings to roost.

CLIMBED STAIRS ON HER HANDS

Too Ill to Walk Upright. Operation Advised. Saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This woman now raises chickens and does manual labor. Read her story: Richmond, Ind.—"For two years I was so sick and weak with troubles from my age that when going up stairs I had to go very slowly with my hands on the steps, then sit down at the top to rest. The doctor said he thought I should have an operation, and my friends thought I would not live to move into our new house. My daughter asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had taken it with good results. I did so, my weakness disappeared, I gained in strength, moved into our new home, did all kinds of garden work, shoveled dirt, did building and cement work, and raised hundreds of chickens and ducks. I cannot say enough in praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and if these facts are useful you may publish them for the benefit of other women."—Mrs. M. O. You do not want a slow treatment for itching scalp when hair is falling and the dandruff germ is killing the hair roots. Delay means no hair.

Get, at any drug store, a bottle of zemo for 25c or $1.00 for extra large size. Use as directed, for it does the work quickly. It kills the dandruff germ, nourishes the hair roots and immediately stops itching scalp. It is a pure, reliable, antiseptic liquid, is not greasy, is easy to use and will not stain. Soaps and shampoos are harmful, as they contain alkali. The best thing to use for scalp irritations is zemo, for it is safe and also inexpensive.

MEN SHOULD STEP IN AND SETTLE THE SERVANT PROBLEM.

"K"

"I am almost always tired; that's all, Max."

She eyed him bravely.

"Aren't you going to let me make love to you at all? You get away beyond my reach."

"I was looking for the paper to read to you."

A sudden suspicion flamed in his eyes.

"Sidney, you don't like me to touch you any more. Come here where I can see you."

The fear of agitating him brought her quickly. For a moment he was appeased.

"That's more like it. How lovely you are, Sidney!" He lifted first one hand and then the other to her hips. "Are you ever going to forgive me?"

"If you mean about Carlotta, I forgive that long ago."

He was almost boyishly relieved. What a wonder she was! So lovely, and so sane. Many a woman would have held that over him for years—not that he had done anything really wrong on that nightmare excursion. But so many women are exigent about promises.

"When are you going to marry me?"

"We needn't discuss that tonight, Max. Can't we talk things over when you are stronger?"

Her tone caught his attention, and turned him a little white. He faced her to the window, so that the light fell on her.

"What things? What do you mean?"

He had forced her hand. She had meant to wait; but, with his keen eyes on her, she could not dissemble.

"I am going to make you very unhappy for a little while."

"Well?"

"I've had a lot of time to think. It isn't that I am angry. I am not even jealous. I was at first. It isn't that. It's hard to make you understand. I think you care for me."

"But, good heavens, Sidney, you do care for me, don't you?"

"I'm afraid I don't, Max; not enough."

She tried to explain, rather pitifully. After one look at his face, she spoke to the window.

"I'm so wretched about it. I thought I cared. To me you were the best and greatest man that ever lived. I—when I said my prayers, I—But that doesn't matter. You were a sort of god to me."

He groaned under his breath.

"No man could live up to that, Sidney."

"No, I see that now. But that's the way I cared. It's just that I never loved the real you, because I never knew you."

When he remained silent, she made an attempt to justify herself.

"I'd known very few men," she said. "I came into the hospital, and for a time life seemed very terrible. There were wickednesses I had never heard of, and somebody always paying for them. I was always asking, Why? Why? Then you would come in, and a lot of them you cured and sent out. You gave them their chance, didn't you see? Until I knew about Carlotta, you always meant that to me. You were like K—always helping."

The room was very silent. In the nurses' parlor, a few feet down the corridor, the nurses were at prayers.

"Yes, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death—"

The man in the chair stirred. He had come through the valley of the shadow, and for what? He was very bitter. He said to himself savagely that they would better have let him die.

"You say you never loved me because you never knew me. I'm not a rotter, Sidney. Isn't it possible that the man you cared about, who—who did his best by people and all that—is the real me?"

She gazed at him thoughtfully. He missed something out of her eyes, the sort of lustrous, wistful greatness.

Measured by this new glance, so clear, so appraising, he shrank back into his chair.

"The man who did his best is quite real. You have always done your best in your work; you always will. But the other is a part of you too, Max. Even if I cared, I would not dare to run the risk."

She took a step toward the door, hesitated, came back, and put a light hand on his shoulder.

"I'm sorry, dear Max."

She had kissed him lightly on the cheek before he knew what she intended to do. So passionless was the little caress that, perhaps more than anything else, it typified the change in their relation.

When the door closed behind her, he saw that she had left her ring on the arm of his chair. He picked it up. It was still warm from her finger. He held it to his lips with a quick gesture. To all his successful life he had never before felt the bitterness of failure. The very warmth of the little ring hurt.

Why hadn't they let him die? He didn't want to live—he wouldn't live. Nobody cared for him! He would—His eyes, lifted from the ring, fell on the red glow of the roses that had come that morning. Even in the half light, they glowed with fiery color.

The ring was in his right hand. With the left he settled his collar and soft silk tie.

K. saw Carlotta that evening for the last time. Katie brought word to him, where he was helping Harriet close her trunk—she was on her way to Europe for the fall styles—that he was wanted in the lower hall.

"A lady!" she said, closing the door behind her by way of caution. "And a good thing for her she's not from the alley. The way those people beg off you is a sin and a shame, and it's not at home you're going to be to them from now on."

So K. had put on his coat and, without so much as a glance in Harriet's mirror, had gone down the stairs. Carlotta stood under the chandelier, and he saw at once the ravages that trouble had made in her. She was a dead white, and she looked ten years older than her age.

"I came, you see, Doctor Edwardes." Evidently she found it hard to speak.

"You were to come," K. encouraged her, "to see if we couldn't plan something for you. Now, I think I've got it. You know, of course, that I closed my hospital. They are trying to persuade me to go back, and—I'm trying to persuade myself that I'm fit to go back. You see,—"his tone was determinedly cheerful—"my faith in myself has been pretty nearly gone. When one loses that, there isn't much left."

"You had been very successful." She did not look up.

"Well, I had and I hadn't. I'm not going to worry you about that. My offer is this: We'll just try to forget about—about Schwitters and all the rest, and if I go back I'll take you on in the operating room."

"You sent me away once!"

"Well, I can ask you to come back, can't I?" He smiled at her encouragingly.

"Are you sure you understand about

Max Wilson and myself?"

"Everyone makes mistakes now and then, and loving women have made mistakes since the world began. Most people live in glass houses, Miss Harrison. And don't make any mistake about this: People can always come back. No depth is too low. All they need is the will power."

He smiled down at her. She had come armed with confession. But the offer meant reinstatement, another chance. She would work her finger-ends off for him. She would make it up to him in other ways. But she could not tell him and lose everything.

"Come," he said. "Shall we go back and start over again?"

He held out his hand.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Late September had come. The Street had been furiously busy for a month. The cobblestones had gone, and from curb to curb stretched smooth asphalt. To this general excitement the strange case of Mr. Le Moyne had added its quota. One day he was in the gas office, making out statements that were absolutely ridiculous. And the next there was the news that Mr. Le Moyne had been only taking a holiday in the gas office and that he was really a very great surgeon and had saved Dr. Max Wilson.

The Street, which was busy at the time deciding whether to leave the old sidewalks or to put down cement ones, had one evening of mad excitement over the matter—of K., not the sidewalk—and then had accepted the new situation.

But over the news of K.'s approaching departure it mourned. The Street made a resolve to keep K., if possible. If he had shown any "high and mightiness," as they called it, since the change in his estate, it would have let him go without protest. But when a man is the real thing—so that the newspapers give a column to his having been in the city almost two years—and still goes about in the same shabby clothes, with the same friendly greeting for everyone, it demonstrates clearly, as the baritone put it, that "he's got no swelled head on him; that's sure."

A little later, K., coming up the Street as he had that first day, heard the baritone singing:

"Home is the hunter, home from the hill, And the sailor, home from the sea. Home! VVY, this was home. The Street seemed to stretch out its arms to him. The alanthus tree waved in the sunlight before the little house. Tree and house were old: September had touched them. Christine sat sewing on the balcony. A boy with a piece of chalk was writing something on the new cement under the tree. He stood back, head on one side, when he had finished, and inspected his work. K. read in chalk on the smooth street:

Max Wilson.
Sidney Page.

The baritone was still singing; but now it was "I'm twenty-one, and she's eighteen." The light was gone from K.'s face again. After all, the Street meant for him not so much home as it meant Sidney. And now, before very long, that book of his life, like others, would have to be closed.

He turned and went heavily into the little house.

Christine called to him from her little room.

GRANDMOTHER KNEW

There Was Nothing So Good for Congestion and Colds
as Mustard

But the old-fashioned mustard-plaster burned and blistered while it acted. You can now get the relief and help that mustard plasters gave without the plaster and without the blister.

Musterole does it. It is a clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. It is scientifically prepared, so that it works wonders, and yet does not blister the tenderest skin.

Just massage Musterole in with the finger tips gently. See how quickly it brings relief—how speedily the pain disappears.

Use Musterole for sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuritis, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it often prevents pneumonia).

the baritone:

"I thought I heard your step outside. Have you time to come in?"

K. went through the parlor and stood in the long window. His steady eyes looked down at her.

"I see very little of you now," she complained. And, when he did not reply immediately: "Have you made any definite plans, K.?"

"I shall do Max's work until he is able to take hold again. After that—"

"You will go away?"

"I think so. I am getting a good many letters, one way and another. I suppose, now I'm back in harness, I'll stay. My old place is closed. I'd go back there—they want me. But it seems so futile, Christine, to leave as I did, because I felt that I had no right to go on as things were; and now to crawl back on the strength of having had my hand forced, and to take up things again, not knowing that I've a bit more right to do it than when I left."

"I want to see Max yesterday. You know what he thinks about all that."

He took an uneasy turn up and down the balcony.

"But who?" he demanded. "Who would do such a thing? I tell you, Christine, it is impossible."

She did not pursue the subject. Her thoughts had flown ahead to the little house without K., to days without his steps on the stairs or the heavy creak of his big chair overhead as he dropped into it.

But perhaps it would be better if he went. She had her own life to live. She had no expectation of happiness, but, somehow or other, she must build on the shaky foundation of her marriage a house of life, with resignation serving for content, perhaps with fear lurking always. That she knew. But with no active misery. Misery implied affection, and her love for Palmer was quite dead.

Everyday Wisdom By DON HEROLD

Policemen are decorative and impressive, and sometimes useful. Policemen interrupt fires, fights, orators and traffic.

About all that is asked of most policemen is that they stay out of doors where they can be seen, but in spite of orders, policemen sometimes go indoors.

For some reason or other, the universal color scheme of policemen is blue. We do not know why this is, except, perhaps, to let you know, when you are having a fight or something else illegal, and a policeman comes up, that it is a policeman who has just come up, and that it is time to stop the illegal thing you are doing. This saves the policeman carrying a business card and going through a lot of formal explanations when he stops a fight or anything. A policeman in a blue uniform can be seen a block away, so by the time he arrives on the scene, the fight is over and the participants have fled. This suits the policeman. Policemen would rather pursue criminals than catch them.

Policemen make cities look metropolitan, and each new administration tries to make a city look more metropolitan than ever. It is expensive, but expected—and we must have our law and order.

Hard as we are on policemen, we never could see that it is any favor to a policeman to make him stand out in the rain and direct traffic.

Hard to Kill. Penguins have an extraordinary amount of vitality and are harder to kill than any ordinary cat. A writer once had occasion to kill a large bird aboard his ship, the Southern Cross, and, making use of the weapon next his hand, he drove a large spike square through the creature's head and finished the operation by nailing it fast to the deck. That seemed to make the job very complete, and he went below decks for dinner. Coming up an hour later, his astonishment was prodigious on beholding the penguin, head erect, flippers out, waddling about, apparently without a thought of the spike, which still remained transfixed in his cranium.

A Human Garbage Box!

(By Samuel Hamilton, M. D.)

The lower intestine is a receptacle for waste matter. It is most important that this garbage box be not neglected, for many are the victims of disease traceable to neglect of this part of the food tube. Eat coarse food, drink plenty of pure water, and occasionally take a mild laxative such as you can obtain at any drug store. Ask for Pleasant Pellets, which were invented by Dr. Pierce 40 or 50 years ago and made of May apple, jalap, leaves of aloes. Thus you will prevent the poisons entering the blood.

The more injurious the poisons passing through the kidneys, the quicker will those organs degenerate. The wise policy is to lighten the work of the kidneys by taking Anuric before meals. If uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, lumbago, gout, sciatica, it is wonderful how quickly Anuric dispels the pain and stiffness. Anuric can be obtained at almost any drug store.

Dinner Stories

A Chinaman was brought before a magistrate in a court of a Canadian city and received a fine for a slight misdemeanor. The judge had great difficulty in making the oriental understand for he pretended not to know a word of English.

"Look here, man," he said disgustedly, "that is $1. Do you see? Pay it—otherwise in jail! Understand?" The Chinaman signified that he did not understand, and the magistrate repeated it.

"Let me talk with him, your honor," said the portly officer who had arrested the man. "I'll make him understand."

When the judge had given him leave the officer approached the Chinaman and shouted in his ear:

"Say, you, with the teakettie face, can you hear anything? You've got to pay a $2 fine!"

"You liar!" cried the Chinaman, "it's only $1."

"Would you mind if I went into the smoking car, dear?" asked the bridegroom.

"What! To smoke, sweetheart?" returned the bride.

"Dear me, no," replied the young husband, "I want to experience the agony of being away from you so that the joy of my return will be all the more intensified."

Clarence announced his coming by a series of howls. "Oh, my finger, my finger," he said.

"Poor little finger," mother cooed. "How did you hurt it?"

"With the hammer."

"When?"

"A long time ago," Clarence sobbed.

"But I didn't hear you cry."

"I didn't cry then; I thought you were out," said Clarence.

A Boston woman applied for a pension the other day. "And pray, madam," asked the pension examiner, "why do you think yourself entitled to a pension?" "My husband and I fought all through the war," was the reply.

Horses and Hares. Unlike most animals, horses have no eyebrows, and hares are without eyelids.

a friend to tender skins

Many ill-made toilet soaps contain free alkali, a harsh chemical which tends to dry and injure the skin or hair. Resinol Soap contains absolutely no free alkali, and to it is added the soothing, healing Resinol medication, which doctors have used for over 20 years in treating skin troubles. Thus it comforts tender skins, and helps nature clear the complexion and keep the hair rich, lustrous and free from dandruff. Sold at all druggists' and toilet counters.

Telephone Courtesy

WE live in a hustling, bustling era. We are busy and we want things to move and so we are thoughtless and at times forget the little amenities due our fellows.

We are impatient; we speak brusquely to the telephone operator; we are provoked if our telephone bell is rung by mistake; we fret over trifling delays and if we get a wrong number—words fail.

And then we realize that possibly the operator was not wholly to blame and we are just a little sorry and wish we had not been quite so hasty. Let us be just a little more thoughtful and a little more considerate. Let us remember that our call was only one of two-and-one-half-million the operators are handling daily. Let us pull for the sunshine instead of the shadow and remember

The Face With the Smile Wins.

GOPHER TOSSERS LOOM UP STRONG AS BADGER'S FOE

Minnesota Stronger Than in Years
With Four Veterans on Squad—
Wisconsin's Showing Good.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Madison, Wis., Jan. 10.—With two victories to their credit, the University of Wisconsin basketball team started work this afternoon for their contest on Saturday with Minnesota, at Minneapolis. Dr. Meanwell is fairly well pleased with the showing of the men made in the first games of the year, but he realizes that they are not of championship caliber at the present time. With Lewis and Olsen, the only veterans playing, the team was subjected to an erratic style of play in both the Ohio and Northwestern games.

The game with Minnesota should prove a test for the Badgers, because the Gophers are reputed as having the strongest five in many seasons. They have three veterans of last year in addition to Statsvold, a star of the 1915 team, who was out of school last year. With these four men playing Minnesota should have a squad which will be a strong contender for conference honors. Dr. Meanwell is not making any predictions as to the result of the game, but went as far as to say that Minnesota from his early reports is nearly as strong as Illinois and Chicago. If he is correct in his statement it will be a close contest on Saturday.

The game with Northwestern on Monday demonstrated one thing to the Badger coach, and that is that his men have fighting spirit and can pull a game out of the fire after being left far in the rear. With only five minutes to play in the second half, Wisconsin was six points behind, but by a determined dash and excellent goal shooting they tied the count with but eight seconds left to play. In the five minutes overtime the Badgers had easy traveling and rolled up ten points. Wisconsin played poorly throughout the contest with the exception of the extra period, when they completely bewildered their opponents.

But two days remain in which the men will be prepared for the Minnesota game. Wednesday a stiff scrimmage will be dealt out to the men, followed by another stiff drill on Thursday. Friday evening the Badgers will leave for Minneapolis and will rest until the game on Saturday. The members of the team returned from the two game trip in good condition. No one on the team is any the worse for the two strenuous games, although Carlson scratched his eye in the Ohio State game. His injury did not keep him from playing the Northwestern game, where his guarding was the feature of the contest.

Badger fans are beginning to wonder what Dr. Meanwell will do with his team when Captain Lewis graduates in February. Lewis has been the leading scorer in the conference for two years, and is one of the best forwards Wisconsin ever had. O'Brien, a veteran guard, will become captain with the graduation of Lewis. But three more contests remain before the first school semester is over. In addition to the Gopher game on Saturday Illinois will be played on the 20th and Chicago on the 26th.

The story that Manager Clarence Rowland will put a ban on his pitchers driving automobiles during the next season is confirmed and more, for it is said Rowland thinks that batting around in automobiles is just as bad for any player as it is for a pitcher. Rowland's idea is that a pitcher who puts in several hours a day gripping the steering wheel of a car so tires his muscles as to damage his effectiveness in the box. It would seem so.

The management of the Chicago Cubs has returned to the Peoria Three-league club Charley Pechous, third baseman. Pechous was one of the Federal League "stars" much talked of when the Cubs and Whales were consolidated, but he failed to shine and Tinker sent him to Peoria. He looked pretty good in that class and Tinker recalled him, but he won't do for Fred Mitchell, who has major league ideas.

If silence alone were golden no manager of a fighter ever would amass enough of the precious metal to fill the wisdom tooth of a baby.

HENDERSON LOSES TO ADAMS IN FAST BOUT

SOUTHERN WISCONSIN ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION DRAWS BIG CROWD AT LAST EVE-NING'S BOUTS.

MANNS TRIMS GRACE

Two Janesville Boys Win Their Fights—
Krause Challenges Adams—
All Good Fights.

RESULTS OF LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS

George Adams (113½) of Chicago defeated Charley Henderson (116½) of Kenosha in ten rounds.
Billy Manns (144½) of Cleveland defeated Jack Grace (143½) of Oakland, Cal., in eight rounds.
Young O'Donnell of Rockford quit at end of fifth round in fight with Kid Meyers of Janesville.
Battling Swann of Janesville beat Bud Corbett of Beloit in three rounds.

George Adams of Chicago defeated Charley Henderson of Kenosha in a ten round, closely fought battle, before the largest crowd that has ever assembled in this city to view a boxing exhibition. Adams was the choice of the crowd almost from the first because of his clean, quick blows, which he managed to land with telling effect not only on his long lunge but when coming into clinches.

The many clinches were the only things to slow up this fight, for the men were both fast, aggressive fighters. Each round opened with Adams forcing the fight, hammering at Henderson with snappy straight arm blows that by the middle of the bout had the bigger Henderson bleeding from several cuts on his forehead, cheek and chin. During much of the fight blows were exchanged one for another, but on the whole Adams were the harder and better directed. Especially toward the last Henderson became a little excited and began swinging wildly. Though Henderson managed to draw blood from a stinging blow on the cheek, Adams did not change in appearance from the beginning to end. He was clean, cool and sure, with a wonderful ability to swing his lithe little body out of the way of crashing blows that would have knocked out a man less quick than he was.

The first four rounds were practically draws, with Adams a shade the better; the fifth was perhaps the best round of the bout, opening with Adams forcing the fight, completely leaving his feet a couple of times to make up for his short reach. During the last half of the round they exchanged several hard blows and mixed for better fighting than at any other time during the bout. From then on the fight went to Adams more than it had at first. In the last round the little Chicago boy tried hard for a knockout, but could not get through Henderson's guard.

In the semi-windup Billy Manns of Cleveland won from Jack Grace of Oakland, California, in what proved to be an exceptionally interesting fight. Grace had a wonderful guard that the heavier, harder hitting Manns could not break down until near the end of the fight. Manns was the aggressive fighter most of the time, and landed by far the most number of blows, though many of them never broke through Grace's guard. At the first the crowd seemed to be with the smaller western boy, and the first three rounds were easily his; and then Manns began to find the holes in Grace's guard, and drove in one swinging uppercut after another. Manns won the fight by his superior ring generalship. In another round he would have knocked out Grace. The latter was a clever fighter, very quick, both on his feet and in driving in blows, but he did not make his punches tell the way his larger opponent did. Manns' blows usually came in pairs, while Grace could seldom land more than one at a time.

In the second fight of the evening's card Roy Meyers of this city hammered Ray O'Donnell of Rockford unmercifully; the fight was called at the end of the fifth round to "prevent any accident." Meyers looks like a coming fighter, if he can get over some of the awkwardness that slows him up so much now. His blows, especially his uppercuts, are long and swinging and land with terrific force, but if he wants to do anything to a good fighter, he must become quicker on his feet. By the fourth round he had the smaller Rockford boy groggy, though the latter had started the fight on a pretty even basis. All during the fifth round Meyers hammered O'Donnell about the ring from one corner to another. O'Donnell put up a plucky fight, but could not stand up under the terrific pounding of the Janesville boy's swinging blows.

In the first bout of the evening another Janesville boy, Bud Swann, played with Bud Corbett of Beloit until the fight was stopped in the third round. Both seemed a bit scary at first, for it was their first fight, but by the end of the first round the fight had resolved itself into Swann's landing one on the Beloit lad every time the latter came within reach.

On the whole the evening's card was a good one, and the large crowd seemed pretty well satisfied with the bouts. The opinion seemed to be that both Adams and Henderson could have put up a harder fight than they did, but there was little complaint, for neither did any stalling. Knockout Krause of Milwaukee, who was defeated by Henderson here in the last bout put on by the Southern Wisconsin sin Athletic association, challenged Adams for a go in a short time.

The crowd was the largest the new association has ever had, and in fact was larger than any ever assembled here for a fight, and showed itself to be a crowd of good sportsmen by complying with Referee Duffy's request that all applause be held until the end of the rounds.

COUNTY GAME ASSOCIATION POSTPONES ITS MEETING

At the annual meeting of the Rock County Game Protective association, held at the city hall last evening, all business was held over until the adjourned meeting convenes on the last Friday of this month, January 26. In the meantime notices will be sent to all of the three hundred and fifty members of the association, and an effort will be made to secure a large attendance to consider several important matters that are deeply concerned with the life and success of the club.

Another scheme would be to allow the batter to steal first.
